Gary Passanisi on the homestretch of the 1,600 and crossed the finish line with a whoop that may have heard in Davenport.

"I gave it my shot," said DeWald of his kick, And Soquel is glad he did. DeWald sparked the Knights to big points in the distance events, helping them to dethrone San Lorenzo Valley for the league title. Led by DeWald's first (1,600) and second (3,200) places, Soquel beat runner-up SLV 139-194, with help of a 30-6 advantage in those two races.

Soquel was expected to win.

way, but the damage was done: Harbor 139 points, Soquel 126, and SLV 121.

"When I run, I have to try my hardest," Carniglia said. "I told myself I could do it. I just had to focus the pain out of my mind."

On a team weakened by injuries to their sprinters, a team strength, Harbor athletes such as Carniglia picked up the slack and found ways to win. And they were certainly needed.

With two events left — the 3,200 and 1,600 relay — SLV had 114 points, Harbor 113, and Soquel 110.

Though Soquel had hopes of snagging points here and there, the meet was safely in the hands of the Pirates. For one thing, SLV's Jennie Warfield was out of events.

She won three of them - the 100, long jump, 100 hurdles — and was second in the shot put, giving the Cougars 38 points singlehandedly. She won eight league titles over the past three But it wasn't enough. With Nicole leading the way with a final lap sur Soquel's Amy Yule, Harbor piled up in the 3,200, to Soquel's 8 and SLV's That was the meet.

Grellman said.

Going into the first of those, the 1,6 distance coach Gary McConnell ga runners together and told them, "It' to win the meet. Just think one place Everyone of them is important."

Harbor had just been beaten by So 400 relay for the first time this year, Knights a mental boost.

"The first event sets the tone," said Soquel relay member Rosada Martin, who later upset Harbor's Breanna Haut, recovering from mononucleosis, in the pole vault. "This is a moral victory for us, these are extremely important points," Michelle Deverell said. But Harbor halted Soquel's momentum immediately in the 1,600. Gehrkens pulled away from Yule in this one, too. And, though risking burnout with the 3,200 to go, Gehrkens ran for extra points by competing unexpectedly in the 800, finishing second to teammate Marcia Wallis. Soquel tried to maximize their points by taking two of its best athletes, Deverell and Kerry in the revents. It worked, Butler won three events — the 200, 400, and 400 relay — but the Knights knew they couldn't depend on a relay victory if the meet came down to the final event. As it was, Soquel still finished second in the race to Harbor.
